Graduates of “Managing for Superior Results I” become skilled at creating an environment of motivation, commitment, growth and accountability. As a result they are given more to do. They are tasked with creating results when time is short, resources are limited and expectations are sky high. They get given teams who are struggling and challenged to turn them around. They are asked to lead other managers and to lead up. They get given responsibility for implementing important change initiatives. They are tasked with bringing optimism and ideas when cynicism and doubt are taking hold. The tools in this program are a direct response to the challenges graduates face in the next step of their development as people and business leaders.
